Herman didn't care much for material things, he was an amazing family man & that was what his life was about. He was the best Dad, Step-Dad & Grandpa you could ask for.

The world lost a truly great person when Herman passed away. He defined what it was to be a great father, grandfather, friend, role model,... If you needed something, he would give you the shirt off his back. He helped me whenever I asked and I know i was not the obly one. He definitely had my respect, no doubt about it. Herman is certainly with God now and is catching up with his dad (another great man) and probably is laying down some rubber on golden streets.

I wanted to send you all my love, and thoughts. I know how it feels to lose a father and every time I would see a picture of Herman online he was always with family and grand kids. What love I saw, he was truly a gift. Not to mention he always had a smile on his face. He would post pretty funny political items/words online that I always loved. You are in my heart Herman and Parker family.

I was about 13 years old and Bud worked with Junior at Chicken Delight. They got off of work at about 11:00 pm and they came home and woke me up. They asked me if I wanted to drive Juniors Studebaker. Of course I said yes, but I needed to get dressed. Bud said no you don't need to get dressed. So I jumped into Juniors car with Bud and started driving in my underwear. I got to the end of the street and hit the brakes. Of course the brake pedal went to the floor. I am panicking because the car won't stop. I looked over and Bud was about to roll on the floorboard laughing. Then he reached over and grabbed the emergency brake and stopped the car. At the time I thought that was a mean trick, but looking back I think that was a great practical joke. That was one of the best tricks he played on me.
