My beautiful Wita. Although I know you are in a better place having a party dancing with your parents, children, grandchildren, sisters and many more, I miss you so much. Thank you for raising me to be the strong woman I am now. I will always cherish all the stories you've shared with me and the deep conversations we've had. Us watching all your favorite novelas and Casa Cerados together. Words can't describe how much of an amazing woman you were. How much you inspired me to always walk with my head held high no matter how low life felt. Fito and I were honored for you to hold our 2 beautiful children you ALWAYS said I will have despite what the doctors said. We believe this is why our son resembles you in so many ways. So im truly blessed to still have a piece of you with me. Ricky, Michael and I will always hold you close to our hearts and keep your name alive. You are now our guardian angel. Thank you for everything! I love you more!

Bob Rodriguez posted:

My Tia Elba was a woman of strong opinions with a big heart. She made tough decisions because she loved her family. I remember the big, wild house in Brooklyn. And I still have the flashy watch she gave me when I visited her at the jewelry store. I fondly remember her warm smile like the one here in the picture whenever I visited her on Theta Street. She would almost always prepare rice and beans for me which I could not refuse even if I had recently eaten. Despite that I would often have two servings. The more I ate, the happier she was. I would listen to her stories of growing up in Puerto Rico and the family. I only wish I had videoed more of those good times. Someday I will find those old videos and share them. I will always remember you. With love, your sobrino, Bobby.
