Harry Glen Golightly, 80, of Houston, Texas, passed away on July 19th, 2025. Born on November 2nd, 1944, to Jack Hayes Golightly and Pauline Golightly, he would go on to live a colorful <https://life.After> receiving his BFA from the University of Texas, Harry became an artist and art teacher. Beginning in the late 1970s, he created many clear, tinted, and crazed acrylic sculptures that are revered to this day. He taught photography at a Catholic college in Houston, and later taught art at Houston ISD middle schools. Always a teacher, he was a counselor at a summer camp for disadvantaged children for over 10 years. He even spent a short time as a meteorologist before retiring - an education of sorts. Most of his friends will agree that Harry made a memorable impression through his passion for teaching over the <https://years.His> memory lives on in his sister, Judy Shirley of Spring, Texas; his nephews Gregory White of Dallas, Texas, and Hayes Shirley of Spring, Texas. Harry was slightly notorious for being Judy's brother. I ran into him at least twice. Once with Kevin H at a night spot called Of Our Own. Harry and a friend of his in the music business were checking the place out. Kevin introduced us. Harry meet Harry. He is Judy's brother. Wow, I am pleased to meet you....
